

Is Drinking Jeopardizing Your Job or Business?

Video Transcript

This is Alcohol Mastery, my name's Kevin O'Hara, and today I'm gonna be talking about the fourteenth question of the Johns Hopkins 20 questions to test out if you're an alcoholic.

Before we start, you can click the button over here to subscribe to the YouTube channel to get all the updates of all the videos that are going to come up over the next few weeks.

This question is probably one of the more relevant questions and it's as relevant today as it was back in the 1930's when these questions were written.

It basically has a lot to do with if you're putting your livelihood on the line because you want to have a drink.

Whether you've got a job or you run your own business, if you're drinking you can shag the whole lot up, you can really put yourself into a lot of trouble.

For instance, if you've got a job, you can lose your job through not turning up for work, turning up late all the time, or even when you're at work you're not really there, your doing a sloppy job.

Definitely from where I am now, when I look back at all the missed opportunities I've had in my business.

I've always owned my own business so I could never get sacked, but I've lost loads of customers through it.

And I've definitely driven one business into the ground because of drinking.

It's very easy to lose sight of things when you're running your own business, you have no backup like that, there's no one really there saying this is what you're doing wrong except your customers.

And when you're customers know you're doing something wrong, they just don't call you back.

They'll let you finish the job off and you won't get another call from them.

It's one of the things that I've really learned in business that it's a lot cheaper to keep the customers that you already have rather than trying to get new ones all the time.

The good news is that it's never too late to start again.

It's never too late to quit what you're doing while you're ahead, even if it means you have to start everything over again.

It means that you start with a fresh slate, you can move onwards and move upwards, which is exactly what I'm doing.

I haven't had a drink in almost 12 weeks and I'm feeling great, I really am.

Everything seems to be coming out the way I want it, everything seems to be moving forward.

And there'll be no more drink so I won't be moving backwards that's for sure.

So that was the fourteenth question of the Johns Hopkins 20 questions.

Click on the link down below and it'll take you to the website where you can have a look at the post that accompanies this article.

Also if you want to subscribe to the channel, click the button there.

Leave a comment on the website or on YouTube.

I'd love to hear your opinions on the post or on the general stuff that we're doing on the web.

Thanks for watching.

My name's Kevin O'Hara, this is alcoholmastery.com, onwards and upwards!

